

Basic set of cable channels, like it is now works well as a starting point. For channel sets above the basic subscription, most consumers would benefit from having the option to buy a premium bundle or a la carte. If all I want is the ESPN or Disney, I should be able to choose just those channels. Channels that are not popular enough to stand on their own would be replaced with channels that are.